

After Your EGD...

- You may have localized irritation of the vein at the IV site, this can be treated with a warm, moist compress. If symptoms progress please call our office, an antibiotic may need to be prescribed.
- You may have nausea following the procedure, it is recommended that you start with clear liquids only, until the nausea subsides.
- You may have some belching from the air that will be put into your stomach during the procedure
- You may experience a sore throat for 24 to 48 hours. You will be able use lozenges, gargle with warm salt water, or drink warm liquids.
- Symptoms to contact us or go to the nearest emergency room about include: chills and/or fever over 101; persistent vomiting; severe abdominal pain (other than gas cramps); severe chest pain; excessive bleeding or black, tarry stools.